South Side Community Art Center

A three story brick house with Greek revival window adornments and doorway. A white sign with black lettering hangs about the doorway and reads South Side Community Art Center. The blue sky frames the building and the windows reflect light and trees.

South Side Community Art Center is the oldest African American art center in the United States and is a Chicago Historic Landmark.

Whitfield Lovell: The Spell Suite

July 17–September 25, 2021

Mining vintage photographs of unknown people for much of his subject matter, Whitfield Lovell aims to, in his words, “illuminate the humanity and richness” of ordinary African Americans who lived between the Emancipation Proclamation and the civil rights movement. Shown at SSCAC as part of Toward Common Cause are portraits from Lovell’s Spell Suite, a series name that references a sequence of pieces in music or dance and conjures the mesmerizing quality of enchantment. Lucidly rendered and powerfully expressive, these Black figures contradict the stereotypes of African Americans that have been perpetuated by mass media, such as The Beulah Show recording that plays from Lovell’s installation of radios, After an Afternoon. Together, these works probe the effacement of cultural memory with sensuous tones that activate the legacy of those whose personal histories have been lost.
